Multi service operation including Anstruther Lifeboat saves stranded whale

Anstruther RNLI where paged to assist in the freeing of a twenty one foot non dependant juvenile Minke Whale off the coast of Elie on Friday evening.

Both lifeboats launched to join in the efforts with the British Divers Marine Life Rescue (BDMLR), local coastguard, Police Scotland and the SSPCA in a successful rescue to re-float the mammal.

After a successful first re-float of the whale, our D Class lifeboat joined the teams initially to steer the whale away from returning to the coastline but a second grounding unfortunately occurred.

The BDMLR team deployed a re-flootation pontoon which allowed the Minke whale enough water to float once again and, with gentle encouragement, the whale was freed.

RNLI crew member Kevin Calder captured the incident unfolding on his helmet camera and commented, 'we were tasked to respond by the UK Coastguard around 20:30 hours and travelled the short distance to Elie to assist. We arrived on scene and began in the initial task to deter the whale from returning to the coastline but the depth of the water meant the whale was able to swim underneath our lifeboat. We were delighted to assist in the successful second re-floating and would like to commend the efforts of the other services involved in this incident'.

A coastline search was conducted at first light in the area with no sign of the whale.
